

The Church Council at Fairfield Baptist Church is the central leadership body at FBC. Their main duties revolve around praying for the staff and members of FBC and working with the staff in setting the overall strategic direction of the church. They serve as a sounding board for the staff in all matters related to the life of the church. Members of the Church Council must meet the requirements of an "overseer" listed in 1 Timothy 3 and are elected annually, but limited to four years of continuous service. We will be voting on the membership of the Church Council on Sunday, December 15 in our morning services. If you have any questions, please find a staff member and we will be happy to get an answer for you or attend our Q&A on the evening of December 1.

John Stalder and his wife Ruth Ann have been members at FBC since 2013. John is a petroleum engineer and retired from Conoco Phillips after a 45 year career there. John and Ruth Ann live in the Bridgelands and have five grown children and several grandchildren. John has a passion for apologetics, especially in the area of creation science. John and Ruth Ann host a Life Group in their home on Sundays and are involved in teaching the Acts 2:42 Bible Study. This will be John's fourth year on the Church Council.

Roger Whitley and his wife Kay have been members at FBC since 1993. Roger and Kay have three grown children and three grandchildren. Roger is currently retired, but very active in serving at FBC. Roger is a deacon and he is an alternate teacher for an Adult Bible Study at 8:30 and they are both very involved in the JOY ministry. This will be Roger's third year on the Church Council.
